

The Tuesday, November 7, 2017, class that Jennifer Clifton taught at Covenant Village gave the residents the opportunity to express themselves through the creativity of making a landscape collage with handmade paper. They had never worked with this medium before and found it to be fun and educating. Jennifer was a wonderful instructor who took her time and gave simple instructions for the residents to follow and encouraged them along the way. These sessions that the Gaston Arts Council is providing to the residents have given them a different perspective on the world of art. Having different instructors and mediums taught enhances their technique and talent as well as broadens their outlook on art. Thank you for providing these wonderful classes.
